

Introduction to Sustainable Development

A 2-week course in the Atlantic Forest of Minas Gerais, Brazil Appropriate for undergraduates studying environmental science, international studies, economic development, and more.

August 5 – 17, 2012

Students will gain academic and hands-on exposure to topics in rainforest conservation including:

- Environmental monitoring with local students
- Sustainability in the rainforest – current strategies
- Development from the perspective of rural communities
- Field visits to study land degradation and reforestation, bauxite mining, and regional development territories

For more information contact: iracambi@iracambi.com

Cost: $485

Includes tuition, room & board.

Does not include transportation to or from Iracambi.

Iracambi Atlantic Rainforest Research and Conservation Center